13:00 – 13:35	Increasing uptake of biologics: the role of biosimilars <small>Although many studies demonstrate the clinical benefits of biologics in the early phase of autoimmune disease, uptake of these treatments for patients with some conditions is variable in the UK. Hence we believe that this is the right time to discuss different approaches to increasing patient access to biologics based on the evidence of significant cost reduction of biologics after the introduction of biosimilars.</small> Sponsored by Celgene Healthcare [1]	Research Opportunities with Canadian real world evidence <small>Real world evidence can provide valuable insights and customised data solutions for patient-centric research. Many health systems capture a wide array of patient data on an ongoing basis; these data, collected for administrative purposes, are often referred to as "Real World Evidence (RWE)". The lunchtime session will describe, in detail, the format of data available from Canadian health systems and the Medior process for conducting RWE research studies.</small> Sponsored by Medior Health Outcomes Research [1]
